

SANTON WINS CONVERSION OF THE YEAR

The Scottish Home Awards was founded in 2007 to recognise excellence in the Scottish housebuilding industry.

For the first time in the programme's history, the Scottish Home Awards 2012 took place in Glasgow. The black tie event was held at the Hilton Glasgow and was an evening of entertainment and celebration, hosted by a number of special guests.

Bim Sandhu, CEO of The Santon Group, receiving the award

The London based property company, The Santon Group, won Conversion of The Year at The Scottish Home Awards 2012 for The Highland Club development. The sensitive conversion of Fort Augustus Abbey by Loch Ness beat off strong competition from the following finalist:

1. ARKA Architects Myretoun Barn, Menstrie
2. Collective Architecture The Old Courthouse, Rothesay
3. Dundas Estates & Development Glamis Gardens, Dundee
4. Gladedale Capital Balfour Hall, Quartermile, Edinburgh
5. Lochalsh & Skye Housing Association Obbeside, Kyleakin
6. Maryhill Housing Association Maryhill Primary School
7. Oliver Chapman Architects The Courier, Haddington

The Highland Club was also a Finalist in the Rural Development of the Year category.
